Each ball contains a number which indicates the number of hits it requires to be destroyed. When a cylinder is destroyed, the debris falls into the water. The debris is then collected by a machine and the water is filtered. The debris is then used to make a variety of products, including cement, bricks, and tiles. The water is also used for irrigation and for drinking. The debris is also used for a variety of other purposes, including as a source of energy and as a source of raw materials.
